Maggie Strawley, a former Miss North Wildwood, Dance Instructor at Dance Dynamics, graduate of Towson University in dance will chair Access to Art's Bunny Hop Tea scheduled for Sat., April 24th at the Doctor's Inn

Cape May Court House. Maggie Strawley, of Cape May Court House, shall chair Access to Art's Beatrix Potter Bunny Hop Tea on Saturday, April 24th at the Doctor's Inn, 2 North Main St., Cape May Court House at both 12 and 2 p.m. Maggie, who spent her childhood dancing for Mary Beth Clark's Dance Dynamics in South Seaville, spent four years at Towson University in Maryland where she graduated with a B.F.A. in dance, magna cum laude. She was also the winner of the Mary Chiswell Fyffe Award in Technical Excellence and was asked to be a guest choreographer and performer for the Nation Dance and Education Organization annual conference. Maggie was a former Miss North Wildwood.

Strawley will chair Access to Art's 2nd Beatrix Potter Bunny Hop Tea. Strawley, who as a young dance student, danced in Access to Art's Tu Tu Tea, is keeping the chairmanship of the event in the family. Her sister in law, and best friend, Kelly Thompson, was the first chairman of the tea along with Lisa DiBruno at the Doctor's Inn in 2007. "We sold out both teas for that event, and everyone had a wonderful time. We are looking forward to a delicious tea, wonderful singing from Bart Singer, who will perform children's songs, and an afternoon of story telling with gifted regional actors Alison J. Murphy and Jim Maher who will portray Beatrix Potter and her brother.

"Maggie has performed with VT Dance Company and is currently working for CityDance Ensemble as a studio company dancer and outreach teacher. Her most reward moments are when she is using dance to help others as she has done in the past with dance ministry in both Central America and Russia," she tells us said Barbara Beitel, Access to Art, Inc. Director. "At home again, Maggie is teaching at Dance Dynamics where her interest in dance began." Beitel said. Tickets for the tea are $25. adults, and $10. for children accompanied by adults. Wear your Spring finest, come and enjoy innocence, good manners, story telling, singing and a great tea." Beitel said. Call (609) 465-3963 to reserve your seats. There are two lunches, followed by story telling of Beatrix Potter's beloved children's animal tales.
